EQUESTRIAN SPORT: BIG IN BELGIUM

With more than 405 000 horses registered on the Belgium ground, it is the highest worldwide concentration of the equine. In addition, Belgians breeders understood a long time ago the importance of mixing origins as long as the performance is there. Investors from the whole world are flying to Belgium to settle there, to mate their best mares or to buy our best products. They allow their riders to ride in competition with the best horses whose high-quality reputation no longer need to prove its worth. In an economic point of view, Belgian equestrian sports represent more than 17 500 full time jobs as well as an important financial aspect with more than 3,5 billion euros per year.

THE BRUSSELS COMMUNITY LOVES HORSES

An evidence. Very simply. When the Brussels Equestrian Endurance Masters organizers knocked at the door of the Brussel-Capital Region and Visit.Brussels to promote their event, they quickly and fortunately understood that they were playing on a conquered ground. It is necessary to know that a natural passing exists between Equestrian World and the European Capital. Brussels is one of the greenest city worldwide. Dozens of equestrian centres are established inside the wonderful Sonian Forest. It is the perfect spot to welcome such competition with an international influence which gathers the top riders and horses of the discipline. Belgians, and more particularly Brussels citizens, enjoy a high historic reputation in the vibrant equestrian world. The general public doesn't necessarily know about this reputation. Thanks to the Brussels Equestrian Endurance Masters! This lack of knowledge will be corrected. Brussels will offer to competitors, visitors and media its best, through a dream competition and a very professional organization staff.

Patrick Bontinck - CEO Visit.Brussels

SONIAN FOREST

The Sonian Forest is registered on the UNESCO list of world heritage sites since June 2017

The beech cathedral

The beech cathedral takes up approximately 70 percent of the Sonian Forest. This makes the forest vulnerable. In an unvarying landscape like such as this one, fewer types of plants and animals can be found. Even in the soil, the number of useful insects and organisms is limited. In addition, more and more scientific studies show that climate change also has implications for the Sonian Forest. The ever-drier and -warmer summers are detrimental to the beech, except in the deep valleys.

Therefore, the three regions have decided in the future to reduce the portion of the forest that is devoted to beeches. At the same time, they want to preserve the characteristic landscape of the beech cathedral in certain parts of the forest.

Trees of all ages

A Sonian Forest with a greater variety of trees and of different ages—that should soon be the forest's new look, with young and adult trees growing close together. The result: a varied and light-infused forest, where many animals and plants feel at home.

Lanes and notable trees

The stately rows of trees along the lanes are an important distinguishing feature of the Sonian Forest. We must preserve and restore this heritage. The many rare and unusual trees here also deserve this protection. Currently, Bruxelles Environnement and the Association for the Protection of the Trees in the Sonian Forest are charting out the most notable trees. A hundred have been identified and marked.

Parks and open areas

Throughout the course of history, parts of the Sonian Forest have been transformed into parks, arboreta or race tracks: the Bois de la Cambre, the Solvay Park, the park of Tervuren, the hippodromes of Watermael-Boitsfort and Groenendaal. These sites make the Sonian Forest rich in landscapes and habitats. Here you will find water gardens, unusual trees, grasslands and lawns, much different than the forest itself but no less valuable.

Along the perimeters of the forest, between these half-open areas and the Sonian Forest, live a great number of exceptional plants and animals which do not appear in the core of the forest. Moreover, these parks receive a great proportion of the visitors and in doing so form a natural buffer.
