Longines  World Endurance Championships

CH-M-E 160 Km, 25th August 2012

Euston Park Thetford, Suffolk, UK

It is my great pleasure to welcome you to Euston Park in Thetford, Great Britain, for the FEI World Endurance Championships 2012. Staged on a bi-annual basis, this event first took place at Pratoni del Vivaro in Italy back in 1986, when America's Cassandra Schuler steered Skikos Omar to individual gold, and Great Britain took the team title. The sport has developed rapidly over the intervening years, and its popularity is now at an all-time high, with great emphasis placed on the welfare of the equine member of the partnership. Teamwork is key to success in this most demanding of disciplines, and extensive preparation, continuous monitoring of the horse's condition and skillful riding all play a major role.

The horses at this event are the best in the sport, and will be tested over a distance of 160km. The race will start and finish at Euston Hall, which has been home to the Dukes of Grafton for over 300 years, and which was first documented in the Domesday Book in 1087 as a manor belonging to the Abbey at Bury St Edmunds. The attention of the competitors, however, will be more concentrated on the parkland that surrounds the formal garden and pleasure grounds originally designed by William Kent, and completed by the legendary landscape architect, Capability Brown. The course passes through Euston Park's 1,500 acres of glorious woodland, following farm tracks, bridleways and forestry paths.

We will soon learn the destiny of the 2012 medals, and I wish all the athletes the very best of luck, while sending my best wishes to the organisers, sponsors, officials, supporters, volunteers and spectators for a memorable event conducted in a spirit of friendship and sport.

Foreword

by the FEI President

HRH PRINCESS HAYA,
FEI PRESIDENT

Thank you Euston Park!

The History of Euston Hall

Euston first appears in the Domesday Book in 1087 as a manor belonging to the Abbey at Bury St Edmunds. There was a manor house here throughout the Middle Ages and in 1578 Elizabeth I stayed here with the Rookwood family on her way to Norwich.

The Estate, in near ruin, was purchased in 1666 by Henry Bennet, Earl of Arlington and Secretary of State to the newly-restored King, Charles II. He set out to build a grand house in the French style, built around a central court with large pavilions on each corner. Charles II paid the first of several visits to Euston in 1671. John Evelyn, the diarist, was amongst the large court that accompanied the King, and he described the new Euston Hall as "magnificent and commodious . . . splendidly furnished".

The property was inherited in 1685 by his daughter and son-in-law, the first Duke and Duchess of Grafton. In about 1750 their son, the Second Duke, decided to re-model the house and employed Matthew Brettingham who succeeded William Kent in designing Holkham Hall in Norfolk. The domes at Euston were replaced by the low pyramid roofs you see today, and some of the house was refaced. So it remained mostly unchanged until a disastrous fire in 1902 which destroyed the south and west wings and the fine Verrio ceilings. The house was soon rebuilt on the same plan, but became unmanageable, and the south wing, and most of the west wing, were pulled down by the Tenth Duke in 1952.

The courtyard, now the main entrance to the Hall was created by Matthew Brettingham. It contains Lord Arlington's stable block and a service wing linking it with the Hall.

The Church of St Genevieve

This charming church stands on the site of the original medieval parish church (the base of the tower is all that remains now) and is a rare example of an unaltered seventeenth-century country church. It is one of only four country churches to be built during the reign of Charles II, as all efforts were centred on rebuilding the churches in the City of London that were burnt during the great fire in 1666.

After he had completed the building of Euston Hall, Lord Arlington decided to rebuild the church to be more in keeping with his new grand house. His daughter laid the foundation stone (to the right of the tower) in 1676. Lord Arlington consulted Sir Christopher Wren and, employing local builders, it was quickly finished. John Evelyn, the diarist, visited in 1677, and recorded the church as one of the prettiest in England.

Inside, there are elegant plaster bands of decoration around the arches and on the vaults. The fine woodwork is thought to be designed by Grinling Gibbons. The inscription recording the rebuilding is the largest of an interesting range of FitzRoy family memorials. The coat of arms over the door (thought to be by Daniel Marot) is that of the first Duke and his wife Isabella. A new bell frame was made in 1983 and a sixth bell was added.

The Watermill

The watermill was built in the 1670s by Morland for irrigation and grinding corn. In 1731 it was redesigned by William Kent to resemble a church. In 1859 an iron waterwheel was added by Charles Burrell, the traction engineers of Thetford. In 2000/2001 the Duke of Grafton and English Heritage fully restored the wheel and the building.

The Temple

The Temple (not open to the public) is an unusual octagonal folly designed by William Kent in 1746. It was his last work. It has a magnificent octagonal banqueting hall rising to a dome. From here the Third and Fourth Dukes would enjoy watching their racehorses being exercised in the Park.

The Gardens, Pleasure Grounds and Park

The terrace to the south of the house shows how large the original house was - the lead cisterns bear Lord Arlington's cipher, dated 1671. The formal garden to the east was designed by the present Duke around the William Kent summer-house.

The Pleasure Grounds were laid out by the diarist John Evelyn, who was a noted landscape gardener and an expert on trees. His designs for Euston included the walk through the pleasure grounds which can still be enjoyed today. The whole park and river layout was designed by William Kent and is considered one of his great works. The project was completed by Capability Brown.

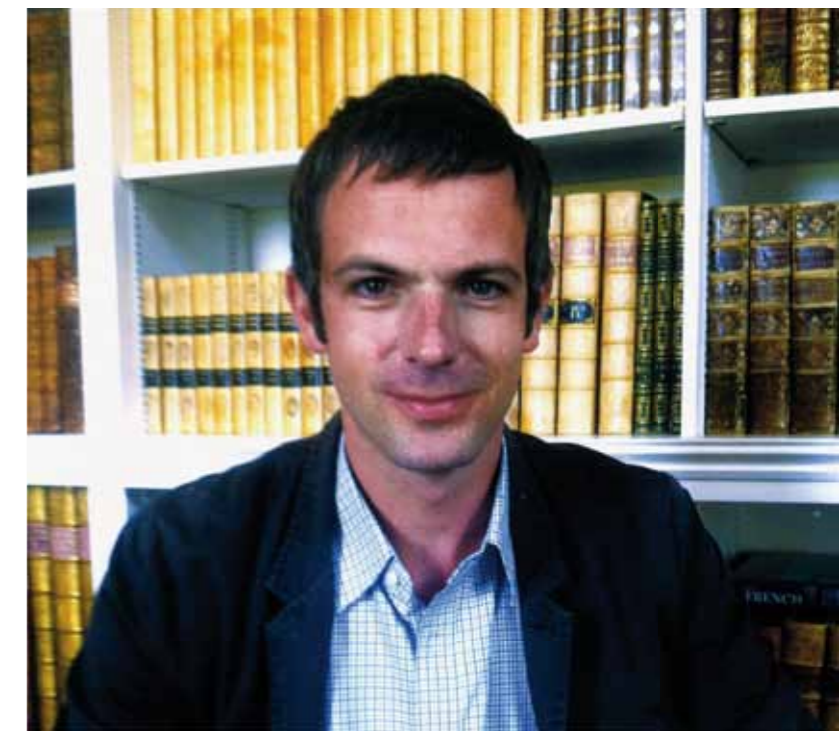

We are delighted to welcome you to Euston Estate for the Longines FEI World Endurance Championships. Euston Hall has been the home of the Dukes of Grafton for more than 300 years. The Hall largely dates back to the 17th century, although the Euston Estate is first mentioned in the Domesday Book in 1087. The Park itself, which provides the venue for the World Endurance Championships, was conceived by William Kent and is considered to be amongst his greatest works, as well as the waterways and private gardens being designed by Capability Brown and John Evelyn respectively. The Euston Estate comprises more than 10,000 acres of woods and arable land, which will provide the competitors with a unique and unparalleled riding experience across this beautiful English countryside.

Whilst conservation and farming do not traditionally sit well together, riders out on the course will experience for themselves the degree to which the Euston Estate is farmed with conservation in mind. The estate boasts many species of rare and unusual birds and butterflies, as well as three different species of wild deer. Our woodland (the largest semi-ancient broadleaf woodland in East Anglia) is managed with both wildlife and productivity in mind.

Coppicing of the woodland opens up areas to light, allowing a wider range of species to co-exist within the woods. This is particularly important for the wildflower and butterfly populations.

While you are here, we hope that you will take time to explore and savour this unique landscape. The team behind the championships has been working extremely hard to produce a spectacular event worthy of a major international championship, and this will be the culmination of several years' development of a fantastic endurance course here at Euston.

Welcome

At the first endurance ride held here, in July 2005, it was my late father's vision that one day, we would host a World Championship. It is very sad for myself and my family, that he is not here to see that dream realised, but I know that he would be very proud of all that has been achieved.

We wish all competitors and crew well and offer our best wishes for a championship combining the highest level of sportsmanship, team work and camaraderie that the wonderful sport of endurance can offer.

The Opening Ceremony of the Longines World Endurance Championships 2012 in Euston Hall started with a variety of entertaining live shows, including fifty dance performers, opera singers and a display of Mario Luraschi, one of the world's leading stunt riders.

It was one of the most fantastic ever ceremony in the world, followed by a parade of 147 participants of 39 countries from all over the world carrying their national flags. They were accompanied with applause of thousand enthusiastic spectators. The multi-layered ceremony lit up the sky with a choreographed firework display, laser lighting and a hot-air balloon.

Thank you Euston Park!

BLUE LOOP 2 - 29 KM

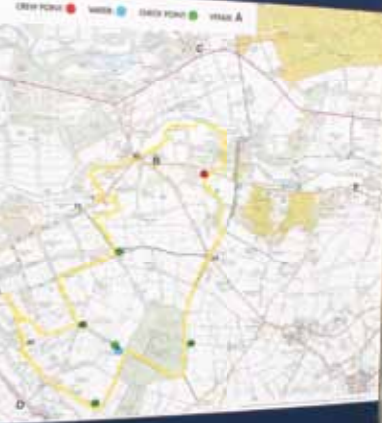

DID YOU KNOW?
The 160 km Longines FEI World Endurance Championships begins with a mass start of around 160 horses from more than 30 countries.

WHITE LOOP 3 - 30 KM

DID YOU KNOW?
90-plus percent of the horses competing at top level endurance races are pure-bred Arabians.

YELLOW LOOP 4 & 6 - 20 KM

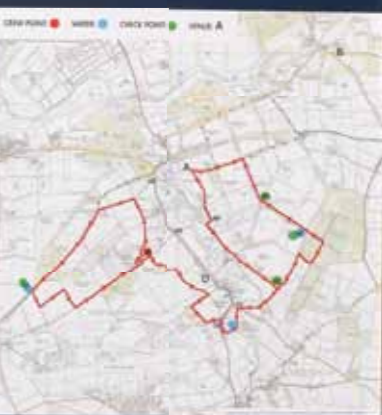

DID YOU KNOW?
During the ride horses have to pass the vet inspection up to nine times - the day before the ride, up to seven times during the ride and at the finish.

PINK LOOP 1 - 38 KM

DID YOU KNOW?
To be judged "fit to continue" during the race, the horse's heart rate must drop below 64bpm within 20 minutes.

RED LOOP 5 - 23 KM

DID YOU KNOW?
Around 50% of competitors will take on average between 7.5 - 11.5 hours of riding time to complete the six loops.

Thank you Euston Park!
